

What documentation needs to be amended/completed when a certified operation wishes to add products to its certification?

NOP operations are not product certifications; they are process certifications. Whether or not an operation can add a new product to an Organic System Plan (OSP) without the need for an additional onsite audit will depend on how different it is from the currently approved products. For instance if an operation wishes to add haymaking to their certification and there are no other haymaking functions at this site, an onsite verification would need to take place to verify the controls of the equipment, nutrient management, current inventories, and production capabilities of the site. However, any change to an operation should prompt notification to the certifying agent immediately.
